Communist Bully

The record stands as an insurmountable barrier to efforts of Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev to sell himself and Russia as champions of peace.

Gen. C. P. Gabell, deputy U.S. director of Central Intelligence, points out that since 1956 Khrushchev and his cronies have, on more than 40 separate occasions, threatened 15 countries with destruction by rockets with nuclear warheads.

Bullying of this nature is hardly representative of a man of peace.

This background should be remembered on occasions when the pudgy Soviet dictator spouts off about his peaceful aims.
